

VIEW POINT VOLUME 368, ISSUE 9531, P247-252, JULY 15 2006

The World Bank: false financial and statistical accounts and medical malpractice in malaria treatment

Pro Amir Attaran DPhil, Karen Barnes, MD. Roger Bates PhD. Fred Binka MB ChB. Umberto d'Alessandro, MD. Caterina I Fanello, PhD, Laurie Garrett, PhD. Theonest K Mutabingwa. Donald Robert, PhD. Carol Hopkins Sibley, PhD .Ambose Talisuna, PhD .Jean-Pierre Van geertruyden MD. William M Watkins, PhD.

Published: April 25, 2006 DOI: https://doi.org/10.1016/S0140-6736\(06\)68545-068545-0)

The World Bank has an annual budget of US$20 billion, and is the largest organization operating with a mission to reduce poverty worldwide. Malaria destroys about 1 million lives a year; the disease is the leading parasitic cause of death for Africa's children and impoverishment for their families. Here we examine how these factors meet in the new Global Strategy & Booster Program, which is the Bank's plan for controlling that disease in 2005–10.